Change in index methodology for the Russell Investments Select Corporate Bond ETF

We would like to advise you of some upcoming changes to the methodology of the index used by the Russell Investments Select Corporate Bond ETF (ASX: RCB) (“the Fund”). Currently, the methodology of the DBIQ 0-4 Year Investment Grade Australian Corporate Bond Index selects securities that are;

- eligible for the Index by filtering securities that have a minimum credit rating of A;
- have a principal amount outstanding greater than $100m; and fits within the term to maturity (TTM) being between 1 and 4 ½ years;
- and then ranking these securities by taking the longest TTM in the eligible universe up to a maximum of 10 securities.

The index methodology has been updated to note that prior to selecting the securities with the longest TTM, preference is first given to securities that were included in the index within the last two years.

We expect this change to lower the amount of turnover and transaction costs incurred in RCB, whilst not materially impacting the characteristics of the Fund.

The detailed index methodology can be found by clicking ‘DBIQ 0-4 year Investment Grade Australian Corporate Bond Index’ on the DBIQ website at <https://index.db.com/dbiqweb2/home.do?redirect=productpagelist>.
