^This performance is net of management fees for both the Managed Portfolio and the underlying managers' fees and costs. It does not take into account any third party platform fees charged to individual investors or transaction costs (including buy/sell spreads and brokerage fees). It assumes income is reinvested without any tax deduction. It is for RIML's preferred model portfolio of holdings. A holding in the preferred model portfolio may be restricted or replaced with another similar asset in the Managed Portfolio on different platforms if the preferred holding is not available. Different platforms may also charge different management fees for the Managed Portfolio. This can result in variances in performance of the Managed Portfolio between platforms. An individual investor's performance will differ, according to the investor's actual exposures to Managed Portfolio holdings and other factors (including transaction timing, transaction costs, actual underlying manager fees and costs and whether income is paid in cash). Platforms will have their own methodology for calculating performance, at both a platform level and an individual investor level. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance.

Main portfolio highlights

An overweight to global equities contributed positively to performance, however benchmark-relative returns from our global equity portfolio were disappointing. Our Australian bond portfolio recorded negative absolute returns as government bonds sold off against a backdrop of higher domestic interest rates. In contrast, our direct Australian equity portfolio delivered positive absolute and excess returns for the quarter. Our exposure to high-yield and emerging markets debt added further, albeit modest, value over the period.

The direct Australian equity portfolio outperformed the benchmark, benefiting in part from positive stock selection within the materials space. This included overweights to James Hardie Industries and Lynas Rare Earths. Partly offsetting these positions was a small overweight to the sector. An overweight to industrials also added value; notably an overweight to Aurizon Holdings. Stock selection amongst consumer staples added further value over the period, including an overweight to Woolworths and an underweight to Treasury Wine Estates. In contrast, an underweight to the strong-performing information technology space weighed on overall returns.

More broadly, global bonds were slightly weaker in the June quarter. Longer-term government bond yields rose (prices fell) over the period, driven in part by higher interest rates in the UK and Europe, and expectations of further rate hikes in the US. Bonds were also impacted by an end to the standoff between Democrats and Republicans over the US government's debt ceiling and a series of mostly encouraging earnings updates; which is to say earnings were 'less bad' than the market had anticipated. In contrast, bonds benefited from early concerns over the health of the US banking system and the asset class's traditionally defensive characteristics amid heightened geopolitical uncertainty. Australian bonds underperformed their global peers over the period, with the yield on domestic 10-year government debt rising sharply as the Reserve Bank of Australia continued to raise interest rates in the face of still-high inflation. The Bank had hit the pause button in April but unexpectedly raised rates another 0.25% (to 3.85%) in May. The Bank lifted interest rates another 0.25% (to 4.10%) in early June; just days after the release of monthly inflation figures that showed prices rose 6.8% in the 12 months to 30 April.

Global share markets performed well over the period. Australian shares made more modest gains relative to their global counterparts.

There were no material changes to the portfolio's overall positioning in April or May. However, in June we reduced the portfolio's exposure to listed equities and (some) higher-yielding credit in favour of Australian government bonds and cash.

Long-term investing: Positioning for 5 years and beyond

The portfolio has a long-term asset allocation of 30% to growth assets. Growth asset valuations have decreased significantly year to date but are marginally higher than long-term averages in the US and similar to long-term averages across other developed markets, such as Australia. Long-term, forward-looking return expectations for US shares and high-yield debt have improved, but the economic outlook creates uncertainty in the near term. Given this, growth assets are still preferred due to superior returns relative to defensive assets over the medium term.

Defensive assets such as fixed income and cash have an allocation of 70% in the portfolio. A tilt toward credit further enhances the long-term return potential, but also increases the risk of losses. Credit spreads have widened, providing additional yield over Treasuries. Government bonds have recently begun to show signs of value across some markets and are now offering much higher yields than at the beginning of 2022.

Strategically, the portfolio has positions in cheaper and higher momentum securities per our researched beliefs.
