

Fact Sheet for individuals

Choice of superannuation fund

Choosing a superannuation fund can be a daunting task, so it's important to be well informed when you make your decision.

Most Australians can choose which superannuation fund they would like their employer to make contributions to. This is often called 'Choice of Fund'.

What happens if I don't make a choice?

If you don't make a choice, your employer will pay their super contributions to a 'default' fund. As some employers use more than one default fund, it's important to check with your employer where your super will be placed if you don't make a choice.

What should I consider when choosing a fund?

Investment performance

Don't base your decision solely on a fund's past performance as this doesn't necessarily mean the fund will perform well in the future. Also consider the fund's investment philosophy and confirm if the fund offers diversified options and a multi-manager platform.

Fee structure

A fund should be able to provide you with a clear and defined fee structure. Be sure to look for any 'hidden' fees or commissions.

Insurance cover

Perhaps one of the most critical benefits that can be compromised when changing funds is your level of insurance cover. Be sure to investigate if adequate cover is provided by the fund you are considering. It is also important to note that some funds will require you to provide medical evidence before cover will be offered.

How to compare funds

If you are thinking of making a move to another superannuation fund, make sure you take the time to compare the features. A familiar name and flashy advertising don't mean you'll receive the best results and experience. Use the choice checklist provided on the next page for a comprehensive comparison.

Decision time

Don't be pressured into making a decision

If you have followed the preceding steps and considered the risks associated with a change of fund, then you've almost completed the puzzle.

If you decide to select another fund, make sure you fully appreciate the impact of your decision.

You could be sacrificing:

- » fee rebates
- » insurance cover paid for by your employer
- » administration fees paid by your employer.

You can call us to see which of these apply to you.

If you're considering another fund because of a financial adviser's recommendation, has your adviser disclosed the costs, any loss of benefits or other consequences of switching funds?

Russell Investments can be your super partner for life

Did you know you can have your next employer¹ make contributions to the Russell Investments super fund?
