Performance results are net of management fees for both the Managed Portfolio and the underlying managers' fees and costs. These results do not take into account any third party platform fees charged to individual investors or transaction costs (which include buy/sell spread and brokerage fees). They assume income received is reinvested without any tax deduction. An individual investor's actual performance will differ from this performance depending on a range of factors including the amount invested in the Managed Portfolio, transaction timing, transaction costs, actual underlying manager fees and costs, any exclusions selected by the investor, whether income is paid in cash and any divergence by the investor from Managed Portfolio weightings. In addition, the actual performance experienced by individual investors may be aggregated and averaged by platform providers, resulting in a further departure from the performance results published here. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance.

Portfolio commentary

The Russell Investments Managed Portfolio – Diversified 50 returned 1.3% on a net of fees basis in November.

The Portfolio's exposure to Australian listed property contributed positively to performance over the period; the asset class significantly outperforming the broader share market following the Reserve Bank of Australia (RBA)'s decision to maintain its ultra-easy monetary policy settings and a sharp decline in longer-term government bond yields. Our exposure to the strong-performing iShares S&P Small Cap ETF also added value in November as US small caps outperformed their developed peers over the period. The Portfolio also benefited from its exposure to Vanguard's US Total Market Shares Index ETF. Meanwhile, a weaker Australian dollar boosted the returns from our unhedged global shares exposures over the period. In contrast, the Portfolio's underweight to US equities detracted from overall returns in November. Performance was further impacted by the Portfolio's value factor bias, with value stocks continuing to underperform their growth counterparts in November.

In terms of overall positioning, the current strategy is to buy back into equities on market reversals as our medium-term outlook on the asset class remains positive. However, we still feel it's too early to increase our equity exposure as our sentiment indicators are not yet pointing to oversold conditions. More broadly, we retain the same themes as recent months, i.e. a preference for emerging markets over developed markets and overweights to both global small caps and credit. Our strategy to 'buy the dip' in growth assets hasn't been necessary but we believe we'll eventually see a market correction worth buying into. To this end, we reserve some capital to capture opportunities as they arise. In saying that, we expect to trim some growth asset exposure if the market continues to run higher (as a way of rebalancing).

The Portfolio's direct Australian equity component outperformed the benchmark over the period. Our holdings in iron ore major, Fortescue Metals Group, industrial property giant, Goodman Group, and building supplier, James Hardie, all contributed positively to returns in November. Partly offsetting these positions were our holdings in Westpac Banking Corp., Commonwealth Bank of Australia and Woodside Petroleum; the latter impacted by a near 21% decline in oil prices over the period.

Moving forward, near-term risks include the Delta and Omicron (or similar) variants proving resilient to vaccines and/or an escalation in infection rates during the Northern Hemisphere winter. Other watchpoints include inflation (and central banks' responses) and a sharper-than-expected slowdown in China; though Beijing has already signalled that more stimulus is on the way.

Market commentary

Global share markets fell in local currency terms in November. Stocks actually began the month well, benefiting from further encouraging US and European earnings updates, better-than-expected US non-farm payrolls data and news the euro-zone economy expanded 2.2% in the third quarter. Partly offsetting these data points were a decline in US manufacturing activity and news that US consumer prices rose a further 0.9% in October. Sentiment was further buoyed by the prospect of additional US infrastructure spending and a thawing of sorts in Sino-US relations following a cordial meeting between the two countries' leaders. However, stocks turned lower midway through the month amid fears that rising COVID-19 infections in the US, Europe and China could derail the global recovery and potentially add to already high inflationary pressures. Compounding this was the discovery of a new variant of the virus in South Africa. Australian shares tracked a similar path to their global counterparts over the period.

Global bonds made modest gains in November, while global credit markets were weaker overall. Australian bonds outperformed their global peers, while domestic credit spreads widened.
