The Multi Asset Growth Funds Range

What happened this month

The Fund delivered a negative return in February following a strong January. Investors revised their interest rate expectations upwards after resilient economic data during the month, including strong US employment and elevated core inflation readings in the US and Europe. Additionally, emerging markets cooled down amid a pause in China's reopening rally. In this market environment, rate-sensitive fixed income such as government bonds and investment grade credit struggled as yields rose sharply. Our exposure to high yield bonds and in particular convertible bonds was less negative given limited credit spread movements and their lower interest rate sensitivity. The Fund's small exposure to listed infrastructure was helpful given its more defensive profile compared to global equities, but our listed real estate exposure fared worse due to mortgage rates resuming their move higher.
