Quarter to 30 June 2026

Macroeconomic views and asset allocation positioning

Topic	Market highlights	Portfolio positioning
Markets move on Middle East developments	- Global markets recorded strong gains overall through the quarter, driven by resilient corporate earnings. Several indices reached historic highs, including the US S&P 500 and the Japanese Nikkei 225. Global equities hit an all-time peak at the beginning of the month and, shortly thereafter, experienced their worst day since October 2025. - Announcements about progress in peace talks in Iran and potential for opening the Strait of Hormuz – and subsequent retractions – drove markets higher and lower, respectively.	- The portfolios retain an overweight to global equities, predominantly the US, which was a positive exposure during May as US shares outperformed and generated strong positive returns. - The portfolios remain modestly underweight Australian shares, where economic growth, productivity, central bank policy and the corporate earnings outlook is more muted. Whilst Australian shares generated positive performance during May, they lagged global counterparts.
Swings between optimism and pessimism around AI drove markets	- Emerging markets, particularly those that are associated with AI, were generally positive but they were not without volatility. There were several significant tech sell-offs during the quarter including the last week of June, where the South Korean KOSPI fell more than 7% in one day. Twice in June the exchange paused trading due to extreme volatility. - Valuation concentration became a risk during the quarter, as performance was dependent on a relatively small number of AI-linked mega cap companies. News about those companies would shake global markets, even if it was positive. In early June, Broadcom issued second quarter adjusted earnings that saw revenue up 48%, however shares fell more than 6% after the news as the guidance failed to impress.
Persistent inflation drove Australian rates higher, dampened enthusiasm for Australian equities	- Australian bonds produced reasonable capital growth during the quarter as investors rotated to defensive assets during periods of significant volatility led by developments in the Middle East conflict and AI-driven tech equity sell-offs. - The Reserve Bank of Australia (RBA) kept the cash rate unchanged at 4.35% at its June meeting – a unanimous decision – however raised the rate once during the quarter, at its May meeting. In explaining its June decision, the RBA Board said it remained focused on ensuring that inflation does not become embedded once higher oil prices pass through to the broader economy. - Australian equities produced growth over the quarter but underperformed international equivalents.	- The portfolios remain cautious on credit due to the asymmetric payoff profiles we see for higher yielding debt such as sub-investment grade credit. - Additionally, we prefer Australian fixed income currently where yields on government bonds are reasonably higher than that in the US. - An overweight to bonds (rate sensitivity / duration) can provide diversification benefits in a slow economic environment or risk-off market backdrop driven by growth concerns.

This performance is net of management fees for both the Managed Portfolio and the underlying managers' fees and costs. It does not take into account any third party platform fees charged to individual investors or transaction costs (including buy/sell spreads and brokerage fees). It assumes income is reinvested without any tax deduction. It is for RIML's preferred model portfolio of holdings. A holding in the preferred model portfolio may be restricted or replaced with another similar asset in the Managed Portfolio on different platforms if the preferred holding is not available. Different platforms may also charge different management fees for the Managed Portfolio. This can result in variances in performance of the Managed Portfolio between platforms. An individual investor's performance will differ, according to the investor's actual exposures to Managed Portfolio holdings and other factors (including transaction timing, transaction costs, actual underlying manager fees and costs and whether income is paid in cash). Platforms will have their own methodology for calculating performance, at both a platform level and an individual investor level. Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance. Please contact the platform operator(s) for performance or current holdings in the Managed Portfolios.
